THE ALBANY LEGISLATURE.

THE EAST RIVER BRIDGE AND ELE-FATED RAILROAD BILLS APPROVED.

The Senate Discusses the Religious Aspect of Bunday Opening of the World's Fair and Passes the Freedom of Worship Bill -An Adjournment in April Probable.

ALBANY, March O .- The annual appropriation bill passed the Assembly to-day. The amount is $0,271,100.67. Of this, $8,254,579.53 is to be raised by taxation. The amounts are ubstantially the same as those of last year. This insures a tax rate at least as low as that secured by the economy of the last Demoeratic Assembly, and probably lower, because the wealth and assessed valuations of the State have increased during the year.

General and Bald Engle Husted and Senator Plunkitt introduced bills to-day to prevent the construction of an elevated or underground railroad on Madison avenue, or any portion of Madison avenue, without the assent of a majority of the property owners representing a majority in value of property.

The Assembly reported the Sulzer bill to permit the construction of the new municipal building in Bryant Park. No objection was made before the committee to the favorable reporting of the bill. The bill is now at the foot of the Assembly calendar. Unless it is taken out of its regular order it will not pass. as the calendar is now crowded and will continue to be crowded until the end of the

It is probable that a concurrent resolution for an early adjournment will be introduced soon. The business of both Houses is well up, and all the important measures except the Supply bill are well under way. It is proposed to adjourn the Legislature early in April. whether or not the computation of the returns from the State enumeration is finished. The extra session to make the reapportionment may be called at any time after the enumeration by counties and towns is finished. There is no necessity for the Legislature to remain in session for it. The enumeration is almost fluished, how-ever, and the count of the names on the enumerators' blanks has begun. Less than a dozen enumerators have failed to make their reports. Considering that there are over 5,200 enumerators this is regarded as a very good showing, and is a proof of careful selection of men to do the work. It is estimated that the population of this State will be more than 0,500,000.

Goy, Flower signed the East River bill and the Supplemental Elevated Railroad bill today, and both of these bills are now laws. He wrote his name with a gold pen which was voted to him at a church fair in Watertown last fall, and, after signing, he presented the pen and holder in a yellow plush case to Senator McCarren, who had charge of the bills in the Senate and who appeared before him with the Brooklyn delegation in favor of the bills. With the bills the Governor filed a memorandum giving reasons for his approvat. and pointing out the powers and possibilities of the new laws.

Senator Hunter's resolution to ask Congress to appropriate no money for the World's Fair unless it is closed on Sunday came up in the Senate and caused one of the religious debates which is a regular thing in one House or the other almost every day. Senator Roesch moved to refer the resolution to the World's Fair Commissioners from New York. He made a speech commenting on the Puritan fathers and saying that this country should not follow them in their bigotry and narrowness.

The Rev. Senator Edwards said that no one wanted the World's Fair to be open on Sunday, and that there were more than ten millions of Christian people who were strongly opposed to any desecration of Sunday. There was no reason why the World's Fair at Chicago should not follow the example of the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia.

Senator O'Comor said that there are others not follow the example of the Centennial Exhibition in Philadeiphia.

Senator O'Connor said that there are others in this country than the descendants of the Puritan fathers. The Christian religion is no part of the fundamental law of this country, and the Legislature has no right to discriminate in the passage of this resolution against people of other religions, who observe some other day than Sunday for their Sabbath.

"I believe in religion." said Senator Brown.

"but I do not think that an observance of the Sabbath day best consists in staying indoors and praying twenty-four hours. Sunday should be a day of rest and not of bondage.

Senator McClelland said that they might as well close up Coney Island as the World's Fair, for Coney Island is much wickeder than the World's Fair would be.

Senator McClelland said that they might as well close up Coney Island as the World's Fair Commissioners was carried by a vote of 10 to 14.

The Freedom of Worship bill passed the Senator Roesch's motion to refer Senator Hunter's resolution to the Werld's Fair Commissioners was carried by a vote of 10 to 14.

The Freedom of Worship bill passed the Senate by a vote of 21 to 11 after a long delate. The bill in its present shape constitutes the Attorney-General, the Superintendent of Prisons, and the President of the State Board of Charities a Board to see that freedom of worship is secured to all immates of State institutions. The object of the bill is to allow Catholic priests to conduct services at the House of Refuge on Randall's Island in order to do this a general bill was introduced which has been before the Legisland: In order to do this a general bill was introduced which has been before the Legislander for several years. The Board of Managers of the Randall's Island institution will be guilty of a misdemeaner if they do not admit Catholic priests, in case this bill becomes a law.

Senator Zerubabel Erwin led the opposition to the bill. He said that he was in favor of the utmost freedom of worship, but he did not beli possible.

Senator Saxton offered a substitute that the

Senator Saxton offered a substitute that the courts thould have jurisdiction, and that they should be substituted for the proposed Board, so that any one who felt aggrieved would go to the court and get redress instead of appealing to a state Board.

"This is the beginning of the plan to inject religion into polities," said Senator Erwin.

"The next thing will be to ask for a division of the public school moneys and to give part of them to the sectarian schools. I want to keep the Church out of polities."

"I dany it, I deny it," and Senator McMahon. "Task for the proof."

"The Senator gives his opinion. He is expressing only that. I think differently," said benator Frwin.

The substitute was lost by a vote of 16 to 15 and the bill was passed. Senator Richardson tried to dodge and went off somewhere for three-quarters of an hour. The Senate waited and suspended the roil call until the Sergeantat-Arms found Senator Richardson and brought him to the Senate. He then voted uye. The Assembly passed the O'Conner bill to exempt churches from the collateral inheritance tax.

Mr. Farquhar will introduce in the Assembly

The Assembly passed the O'Cenner bill to exempt churches from the collateral inheritance has.

Mr. Farquiar will introduce in the Assembly a bill to make the endorsement on all official ballots uniform, so that there will be no recurrence of the Onondaga occurrence of last fall, when the County Clerk got the wrong endorsement on the ballots and vitiated enough votes to unseat a Senator and an Assemblyman.

Senator Aspinail introduced a bill to permit the Long Island lialitond Company to build a bridge from Long Island City to New York. The New York end is to be near the present Thirty-fourth Street Ferry. A union station is to se build at the end of this bridge in connection with the New York and New Jersey bridge, which is to occupy the same station. The bridge is not to be a single-sam bridge, but it is to have piers on the reefs below Binchwell's Island. The orbige is to be used in connection with Austin Corbin's plan to run, a line of fast ocean asteamships from the eastern and of Long Island to Southampton. He thinks that he can make the passing for passengers in five duys. It is proposed to run trains from the West across the Hudson River bridge and over this proposed bridge direct to the east end of Long Island.

At its evening session, the Assembly passed the Sutzer Fenal Gode amendments and Sir Launcelot Wells's bill to repayer Third avenue north of the Harlem.

The Comptroller sent a message to the Assembly saying that the amount estimated to be realized from indirect taxation, particularly from the inharitance tax, had been greatly overestimated.

The Assembly defeated the Byrnes bill to

from the inheritance and overestimated.

The Assembly defeated the Byrnes bill to limit the hours of labor on streed-car roads to ten by a vote of 44 to 40. The Republicans opposed the bill, and the Democrats outside of the cities are not united.

THE HUCKLEBERRY LOAD HEARING. Advocates and Opponents of the Measure

Argue Before the Menute Committee. ALBANY, March 9.-The Senate Committee on Railroads gave a hearing this afternoon on the bill known as the "Huckleberry Railroad" bill. Among those who appeared to favor the was ex-Senator Charles A. Stadler. He said he represented A. G. Hupfel, John Eichler. William Ebling, G. C. Clausen, Henry Zoel ier, and Henry Clausen, Jr. These men. ald represent about $10,000,000 of real He claimed that the special rights conferred by the bill were the right to issue and mortgage its property, the right to

to increase its capital stock. Judge Ernest Hall asserted that there was nothing asked from the city or State. He offered amendments striking out the exemptions from payng a percentage on receipts, selling the franchise at auction, and paving between tracks and adding an exemption clause to relieve the remoters from similar provisions in the General Railroad net. Another amendment provides that the road shall pay I per cent, on all carnings over $1,700 a day, and an extra amount of 1 per cent. on each multiple of $1,700.

L. T. Wood, representing property holders, objected to the bill on constitutional grounds. He said that it evaded those provisions which refuse to give any individual or private correfuse to give any individual or private corporation any franchise with immunity from taxation. This special grant was practically saving that the ampexed district shall have one law and lower New York another. This proposed law would give absolute control in the annexed district. Its promoters would never have to build a bit of extra read if they did not want to, but could keep out other people who would like to furnish the people with better facilities.

Arthur C. Botts, representing the Citizens'
Improvement Company of the annexed dis-

Arthur C. Botts, representing the Citizens' Improvement Company of the annexed district, asserted that the road, under this bill, would be allowed to traverse every section of that district, and could be extended indefinitely. Just as soon as the bill is passed a corporation will be formed to build, not only in one street, but in every street in the district. J. N. Emra said that Mr. Botts represented a very small number of property owners, and that he was simply seeking to obstruct what would be a great public benefit by giving to the residents of that district better transit facilities. Mr. Botts said that he was not opposing rapid transit, but protested against granting to one corporation the right to control the streets of the district exclusively, so that competition would be barred out.

John D. Crimmins stoke for the bill. He clusively, so that competition would be barred out.

John D. Crimmins spoke for the bill. He thought that at least 75 per cent, of the broperty owners were in favor of the bill. F. A. Curley, claiming to represent all the knights of Labor assemblies of New York and Brooklyn, protested against the bill, as did G. B. H. McCrea, a property holder, J. D. Hart, a property owner, spoke in favor of the bill on the ground that it would increase the value of the property. The argument was closed by exJudge, Hall, who handed in petitions in its lavor from property holders to the amount of $20,000,000.

TO SUBSTITUTE HANGING.

Favorable Report Against Electrical Exe-

Albany, March O.-The Assembly Committee on Codes has agreed to report favorably the bill of Assemblyman Stein, amending the capital punishment act of the State. The bill does away with the electrical chair and substitutes hanging. The blil is reported without amendment.

THEY HAVE FOUND OUT ME. COOK,

And He Isn't Likely to Work This Free-

pass Dodge on Many More Rattronds, A glib-talking well-dressed Englishman resented himself at the offices of the New Jersey Central Railroad, 143 Liberty street, on Jan. 18, with a letter purporting to be from E. Wood, district superintendent of the Lonion and Northwestern Railroad at Chester, Eng., introducing the bearer as C. H. Cook, assistant superintendent of that railway, who was traveiling in America for railroad inspection purposes, and requesting all American roads to honor Mr. Cook with passes. Mr. Cook said he was an ex-Captain of the Eightyeighth Connaught Rangers and had served in India. He wanted passes to Washington and back, and he got them. At his request, the New Jersey Central endorsement was put on the letter. The offleers of this road next heard of him on receipt of a letter from Edward Canfield, Assistant Treasurer of the Union Pacific, stating that he had found the representations of Cook to be false, and warning the Jersey Central people against him. I for Jan. 30 Cook went into Sidney Dillon's private office, at 40 Broadway, and finding Mr. Canfield there showed his letter and asked for passes to Oregon. Mr. Canfield was suspicious. Cook talked a great deal about himself, stating this time that he was an ex-may officer of England, and had been invited to go West in a private ear by Vice-Pressibent Webbo of the New York Central. On inquiry Mr. Canfield found that Mr. Webb had never heard of Cook, so he refused to grant Cook's request. New Jersey Central endorsement was put on

York Central. On inquiry Mr. Canfield found that Mr. Weeb had never heard of Cook, so he refused to grant Cook's request.

Yesterday afternoon Cook turned up at the office of the Jersey Central glib as ever with a letter from a Baltimore and Ohio official to the General Superintendent in Chicago asking him to show Mr. Cook through the yards at Newark. No one has been able to find out what this letter means. Mr. Cook wasn't long in finding out that something was wrong. His suspicions were aroused, and with reason, for a policeman had been sent for.

"Just excuse me a moment," he said, and he stepped into the hall and started for the elevator boy blocked the way. He turned, and before any one could stop him, escaped by the West street exit.

Cook has traveled free over a good deal of the United States and Canada, and duped a lot of men who are not in the habit of being taken in.

The New Jersey Assembly Passes the Bill That Will Stop the Raids.

TRENTON, March D.-The Guttenburg Race Frack bill was taken up on final passage in he House this afternoon. Dennis McLaughlin had a sent on the floor, and listened to the dehate and watched the vote with lively interest. He evidently knew "how the cat was going to jump," for the plain observations of some of the men opposing the measure only brought smiles to his face.

"This bill is no longer a bad bill," said one of its advocates. "It has been amended. Instead of allowing priseners to designate the magistrates before whom they shall be arraigned, it now provides that they shall not be dragged out of the town or village in which they are arrested for a hearing or to give be dragged out of the town or village in which they are arrested for a hearing or to give bail."

Kalish of Essex said it was the best bill that had been introduced this year. Hutchinson of Mercer deciated that it was the worst; that the amendment was included to chloroform the consciences of the members who had voted against the bill when it was defeated before. Studer of Essex said the bill ought to be entitled "An act to encouring and facilitate the netarious business of the race track gamblers of the State." Ketchim of Essex declared that the finger marks of the devit were on the bill, and he asked the liepublicans not to soil their hands by touching it. He hadalt cone to Treaton to legislate for criminals. Smith of Morris appealed to the Democrats to vote the bill down. He and Strahan of Monmouth were the only Democrats who woted against the bill. It passed by a vote of 34 to 23, and now persons arrested at Guttenburg at the inslance of the Law and Order League will not to taken off the grounds. A Justice will be handy to admit them to bail.

The Jorsey City Water till was reported adversely in the Senate. The report was sustained by a vote of 13 to 2.

The bill to establish police commissions in Paterson and Camden passed the House after the liveliest sort of opposition on the part of the Republicans, who asserted that Coy. Abbett wanted the bill passed to further personal cands.

SERGEANT VAUGRAN'S BRAVERY. He Gets a Medal for Rescular Five Persons from the Hotel Royal,

The presence of a fire patrol wagon in front of the Mutual Life building at 11 A. M. yesorday and the entrance of the firemen and a lot of others drew a crowd. A good many thought there might be something wrong in the building. The assembly room of the Board of Fire Underwriters soon filled up, and the corridors of the seventh floor were crowded The occasion was the presentation of the gold medal of the Board of Underwriters to Sergeant John R. Vaughan of fire patrol No. 3 for his heroism at the burning of the Hotel Royal on Feb. 7 last.

There was scarcely room for Patrol No. 3 to file in and line up before the President and salute him. Superintendent of Patrol Abram C. Hull was in charge of the men, and President Samuel P. Blagden of the Board of Underwriters presided. The men were three deep, and in the first file, next to Sorgeant Vaughan, were the others who have received medials for fravery. They were John Lake, Joshua V. Moore, Lieut McCann, and Capt. F. S. Grove. President Blagden, in presenting the medal, recounted Sergeant Vaughan's feats of bravery in rescuing five persons, one of them weighing over 200 pounds, while Vaugnan probably weighs less than 100.

It is some time since the Board of Underwriters has awarded a medal, This was the sixth one, and it bore upon its face the regular fire shield of the department in relief, with the words 'New York Board of Fire Underwriters. 18372," on the blue enamel border. On the reverse side was an inscription of presentation, with the date of the fire.

A letter was read from C. W. Kline of Haxletog, Fa., one of those whom Sergeant Vaughan rescued, expressing his gratitude, and praising the Sergeant's bravery. dent Samuel P. Blagden of the Board of Un-

MR. BLANCHARD THINKS HE MAI HAVE BIT BIM A LITTLE.

President Brookfield Sure No Blow was Siruck—An Outburst of Evil Passions that Could Mardly have Occurred if Col. Elliott P. Shepard had Been in the Hall. You're a Har!"

MR.OWENS SAYS HE WAS HIT.

"Who's a liar?"
Biff. "Pull'em apart. No scrapping." He struck me. " He called me a liar."

The two actors in this brief warfare were James A. Blanchard, President of the Republican Club and member of the Union League Club, and James Owens, a coal dealer, of 575 Madison avenue. It happened at the end of very stormy meeting of the District Committee of the Republican organization of the Twentyfirst Assembly district on Monday night. Col. Elliott F. Shepard is a member of this commiltee, but unfortunately he was not present.

The meeting was held at 105 East Fifty-ninth street. William Brookfield, President of the Republican County Committee, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and ex-President of the Republican Club, presided. As this is one of those ticklish stories where the actors have a great dread of being misrep resented, it should be told in their own words o here are the three sides—that of the striker. Mr. Blanchard, the struck, Mr. Owens, and the disinterested spectator, Mr. Brookfield. By special request Mr. Owens's comes first:

MR. OWENS TELLS HIS STORY.

"Now, young man," he said, "you've seen Mr. Blanchard, and you know what a big. strong fellow he is-nearly a head taller than , and more than twenty-five years younger at hat. I'm 70, though I don't look it, while he s less than 45.

"Well, sir, for the past two years this ward has been run by three men, John Proctor Clark, President of the Republican organization: William Brookfield, and James A. Blanchard. The triumvirate, I call them, and they're bound to down me, sir. What d'ye think of that? The three have done all they could to ostraciz : me, but I won't let 'em.

"Now to come to the point. About three reeks ago we had a committee meeting, and Col. Shepard, who was present, suggested that we get a bigger meeting room where we could have lectures. I got up then and moved that we get a bigger meeting room where we could have lectures. I get up then and moved that a committee be appointed, consisting of Col. Shepard, myself, and another gentleman, to consider the thing. I believed that as Col. Shepard had brought the matter up, he would be willing to hear a large share of the expense. Charles A. Hess objected to this, saying that he didn't want the committee to be run by Col. Shepard, or something to that effect. I said: 'Charlie, I'm sorry to hear you speak like that. Col. Shepard is one of our largest contributors.'

"A lew days later—I am coming to the point now—I went to the treasurer's office to look over the books, just to see how much Mr. Shepard had really contributed. I found that he paid in $250 last fall, which was $150 more than any one else had given. Now, what do you think was my surprise to find that neither Brookfield nor Clark had ever given a cent. and that Blanchard had only paid $5. These were the men, mind you, that were running the whole machine. And then, I found, too, that the treasurer, Mr. Kenyon, had been instructed to pay all bills that John Procter Clark marked O. K. I informed him that that was against the constitution. He had paid out nearly a thousand dollars without a single voucher and nothing to show for it except Clark s'O. K's.'

ME, BLANCHARD TELLS HIS.

"Well, sir-I'm near the point now-we had a meeting on Monday night. The freasurer, to my great surprise, got up and said: Mr. Chairman, I was instructed by Mr. Clark some time ago to be nor all bills which he O. K. d. My attention, however, has been called to the fact that this is in violation of the constitution, which says expressly that the Finance Committee must addit and pass upon all bills before they can be paid. I would like to know whether it is the sense of this meeting that I should continue to violate the constitution.

"Then, sir-I'm coming to the point, directly-I got up and began to speak. Mr. Chairman, said I, Those were my exact words. I had intended, myself, to bring this matter before the organization next Monday night, but as it has come up to night, I have a few words to say about it." (Here Mr. Owens got up, buttened his coat, extended his arm, and addressed the reporter.)

"Mr. Chairman, I object to this method of spending the money of this organization. I do not make to decrease any one-I was nest getting into the spirit of the thing, you see—but, sir, it is against the constitution. If Mr. Chark can sain away the money anybody can.' Catch the point? Then I told them what I had tound in looking over the books, and just as I was get-ting into trim the Chairman cut me short. I the money anybody can. Catch the point? Then I told then what I had found in looking over the books, and just as I was getting into trim the Chairman cut me short. I had begun to say that neither Mr. Clark nor Mr. Blanchard nor Mr. Brookfield had ever paid in a cent when the gavel came down. Mr. Brookfield said that the constitution allowed no member to speak more than ten minutes. I asked for speelal permission, but Mr. Blanchard objected. Then Mr. Clark got up and tried to defend himself. He insulted me grossly, sir. He said that I was a damn llar and that he didn't care a damn for me. The Chairman reminded him that that was unarliamentary language, and he took it all back, but he insisted that I had misrepresented things. Well, sir, he spoke nearly haf an hour, and no one interrupted him. They wouldn't allow me to answer him, then. Think of it, sir; think of the tyranny of it?

"After the meeting I went to Mr. Cark and said: Now, Clark, I can substantiate what I said by the books. 'G way from me, he cried, throwing his hands in. Doost talk to me. Gway. I walked away and noticed Air, Blanchard standing near the wail. I went over to nim and said: 'See here, Blanchard, that wasn't fair, You're a liar,' said he. What's said. I you're a liar, said he. What's said. I you're a liar, he repeated. 'Do you'think that is a proper thing to say to a gentleman I asked him. The books prove what I say.' Well, you're a liar,' he said and me the way. I was desired and me. Mr. Blanchard, I said; I am Inot a liar, I am met a liar, and was an early well again.

"Mr. Blanchard, I said; I am Inot a liar, I am met a liar, and metelling the truth, and is seen as I meter a liar, and again." Mr. Blanchard, I said; I am Inot a liar, and again.

ities of the management. The attack came last Monday night. After the meeting was over I happened to be near Mr. Owens when he was making charges, and I told them that they were false. He said I was a lint. For a single instant I forgot myself, and that he was an old man and largely irresmonsible for his utterances, and I struck at him. I am not conscious of hitting him at all, but if I did the blow was very light. The next instant I regretted it, and have regretted it ever since. I had abundant cause for righteous indignation, but I went too far, and am not without blame for losing my temper. I am not used to having my integrity questioned and being called a liar."

To make the story complete, here is the statement of William Brookfield, President of the Republican County Committee, Chairman of the Republican Cutto, committee, chairman of the Republican Cutto, and a prospective delegate to the Minneapolis Convention:

"I presided at this meeting, and I can say that any story to the effect that Mr. Blanchard struck or made any effort to strike Mr. Owens, is false from beginning to end. The meeting was somewhat noisy, it is true, but no blow was struck. I had occasion to call Mr. Owens to order for speaking more than ten minutes, which is all that the constitution allows, and I had to tell him that if he did not stop talking I would summon the Sergents-at-Arms. After the meeting he said I hadn't treated him fairly. His complaint was that the ten-minute rule had never been enforced before, but I told him I was bound to enforce it this time. You can safely deny the story that any blow was struck."

COLLISION IN THE LOWER BAY.

The Rosnoke Rams Her Row Into the Sens

en-Neither Seriously Damaged. The Old Dominion steamship Roanoke came into port on Tuesday evening with a fractured nose, the relic of a brush sho had with a sister ship, the Seneca, off Swinburne Island, in the lower bay. Her eighteen passengers were somewhat frightened by the collision, but no one was hurt on either vessel.

The Roanoke was bound in, and the Seneca was going out. Although the air was beavy with rain the officers on the bridge of each vessel could soon mile shend.

Capt. J. G. Hulphers of the Reanoke says he does not wish to imply by his story of the collision that the commander of the Seneca was in fault. All he knows is that he saw the Seneea emerge from the mist in the Swash Channel nearly a mile away. There was plenty of room for both vessels if each had understood which course the other intended to take. The Roanoko sounded one whistle, which mount that she would go to the right of the Seneca, or that the vessels would pass each other on the port hand, presenting "red to red." Capt, Hulphers doesn't know what was done aboard the Seneca. He heard no responsive signal, and kept on his course until he saw that the Seneca was apparently determined to cross his bow. He then threw his wheel hard-a-port and reversed at full speed.

The Seneca's starbard side and the sharp how of the Bennoke same together. The Reanoke's cutwater was twisted and torm and the rails and bulwarks of the Seneca were smashed. All the passengers on both steams that the vessels would pass each other on the the rails and bulwarks of the Seneen were smashed. All the passengers on both steam-ships came on deck in a hurry, and for a few minutes there was excitement bordering on minites there was excitement bordering on panie.

The Seneca's commander found out that the vessel was not damaged at all below the water line, but he feared, from the badly battered arrearance of the Roanoke's how, that she had received a mortal blow. So the Seneca turned back and escorted her sister ship to the Narrows. By this time Capt, Hulphers had found that the Roanoke was making no water, and he declined further essert.

The Seneca resumed her course and the Roanoke came up to her pler at the foot of Reach street, discharged her passengers and freight, and went inte dock at Morgan's Iron Works at Ninth street and the North River for repairs.

A COMMERCIAL ENTERPRISE.

Jersey City Subscribers Walt All Day for an Agent to Come and Pay Them,

A stream of people poured into the Weldon uilding, at Montgomery and Washington streets, Jersey City, yesterday morning, and kept the elevator boy busy taking them up to the fifth floor, where they expected to find in room 98 an agent of the Commercial Enterprise Company of Philadelphia. The majority of the people were women. When they reached room 98 they found the door locked. and there was no answer to repeated knockings. There were several indignation meetings held in the corridors and on the sidewalk. Each of the visitors had a circular headed: Authorized capital, $500000. The Compectal Enterprise Company, Isaac Shaw, President; T. Hosser, Treasurer, T. Hosser, Carrier and Superintendent of Agencies. Office, 1000 Arch strest, Philadelphia. The body of the circular was as follows:

One of the visitors explained to a Sux re-porter that by paying $1 a week to the com-pany for sixteen weeks each subscriber be-came entitled to $31 eash or $35 worth of clothing. The sixteen weeks were up nine weeks ago. The company then announced that time for subscribing had been extended to twenty-flye weeks. That was up a few days that time for subscribing had been extended to twenty-five weeks. That was up a few days ago, and then the circular came, and the subscribers didn't understand it.

About 1 o'clock a young man, who gave bis name as William Dunbar and said he was the company's agont in Trenton, comforted the expectant crowd with the assurance that an agent of the company would be on hand at 4 o'clock to settle all claims. He had received a telegram to that effect from the main effice in Philadelphia. The crowd white dunfil 4 o'clock and for a bail an hour longer, but no agent appeared. A few minutes later Ounter appeared against the prisoners, as the company against the receiver the last man agent of the subscribers have been made. The negent from Philadelphia had stopped at Newark and was beging claims there. Some of the subscribers hurried down to the Pennsylvania Bailroad to enteh the first train for Newark. A subscriber with whose Tak Sux reporter talked said she did not prefend to understend how the company could pay $31 for $25. She only knew that the company promised to pay it and she invested her money. invested her money.

HIS DROTHER SAYS HE DREW A KNIFE. Henry Frouse Cooper to be Examined as to

Henry Prouse Cooper, formerly a well-known and wealthy tailor of this city, was a prisoner at the Tombs Court yesterday after noon, accused of having tried to kill his brother, Stephen A. Cooper of 54 Broadway. Detective Reap of Inspector Byrnes's staff arrested Cooper at the Alabama House, 143 Bowery, where he had been living. Cooper said that he was a clerk for Blackie & Son, publishers, of 73 Bible House. He denied the charge, saying he went to his brother's store to see two of the employees who had ordered books from him. He was remanded for examination as to his sanity.

Cooper was born in Edinburgh in 1840. He came to America in 1883 from Liverpool, where he had been a tailor. His wife and brother came with him. He opened a tailoring shop here and made money. He moved in 1872 to 54 Brondway, and two years later opened a branch store at 202 Fifth avenue. He showed no signs of mental trouble until 1881. when he was on a visit to England with his wife and four children. In London he thought detectives were after him. In Paris he went on a prolonged spree, during which he payaded the streets in his wife's clothes. On Oct. 50, 1882, Mr. Cooper was taken to

On Oct. 30, 1882, Mr. Cooper was taken to Sandford Hall, a private asylum at Flushing. He was taken against his will, on the certificates of Drs. Beard and Seguin. All attempts to communicate with friends were frustrated. Finally his brother, Capt. Henry Cooper, heard of his imprisonment and obtained his release on a writ of hat eas corrous granted by Judge Donohue on Nov. 1, 1882. Judge Donohue or on Young Donohue on Nov. 1, 1882. Judge Donohue or offered the Sheriff to draw jury to pass upon Cooper's sanity, and on Friday, Nov. 10, the trial was tegun.

Stephen A. Cooper, who now owns the Broadway store, was the only witness of the day. he was a clerk in the store them. He related alleged acts of his brother while in Europe and at home. Letters of introduction to various people, written by Cooper and paculiarly worded, were produced. Numerous real estate deals consummated by Cooper were brought to light. The trial was adjourned until Nov. 17, when Mrs. Cooper testifled that her instand did paculiar things when drank, and that he sang the solding song from "Olivette" to the children. At the resumption of the hearing on Nov. 23 tharles H. Wheeler told of Cooper's admiration of Leautinul women, and of his taking the witness to an Egyptian larem in Paris, where the performers were scantily clad. He said Cooper worried over business matters, and gave other evidence of what was, in the witness's opinion, insanity.

For the defence it was alleged that Cooper's pendiar actions were due to nervous prostration caused by trouble with his brother Stephen and other members of his family. On Pec. 20, 1882, Cooper was declared same. Cooper paid the expenses of the trial, including the fees of his relatives' counsel. After the trial he drank heavier than ever. He parted with his home at 20 East Suty-eighth street, and spent all the money his trustes, when he had a provential dane, 1890, when he again showed signs of insanity and was seen, at his own request to the Home for Inchrines at Fort Hamilton, He disappeared from Fort tried to induce him to go to a private asylum, but without avail.

About a week ago he started out among down-town business offices, canvassing for Hubbard Bross, book publishers, of Philadelphia. He entered his old store with a knife in his hand and threatened to kill his brother. He was dressed yesterday in a pair of light cheviot trousers, a bright blue waisteoat dotted with white, a heavy brown reefer, a brown derby hat, vermilion tie, and gloves, one of which was brown, the other yellow. He said to Justice McMahon:

"I am a Christian, your Honor. I was once weathe. I am still a gentleman. I meant no harm to my brother. I was in his store simply to sell some books and to look once more on what was once mine. It helped me to see my old pince, your Honor, and the familiar sight filled my heart with love, not hate, toward all. I am full of charity, not malice."

MONMOUTH, Ill., March 9.- Fred M. Staley, an inmarried man, 35 years old, was a former resident of this place. Some years ago he renoved to Potawattomie county, Kansas, where he has a ranch. Last fall he concluded to spend the winter in Illinois, but did spend the winter in limits, but did not proclaim his intentions. One day two young men of his acquaintance asked him to ride with them to town. Its accepted the invitation. On the way to town he informed his companions that he believed be would take the train for the East that night, which he did, and he had never written or heard from there until Monday of this week, when he read in a newspaper the

Webster's Application for Ball,

When Laws or Howe appeared before Justice Amirows in Supreme Court, Chambers, yester-'as afternoon to move that his client, Burton Webster, the murderer of Charles E. Goodwin, be released on ball, nearly every inch of standing room in the court room had been appropriated by a crowd of speciators. Mr. Howe died several instances where Supreme Court Judges had admitted persons under indictment for murder to bait after the first trial had failed. It would be impossible to try Webster again, he said, until september, as there are seventeen prisoners in the Tombs under indictment for homielde who must be tried first. He surgested that Justice Andrews fix the bail at $5,000.

Assistant District Attorney MeIntyre op-posed the motion, and declared that the peo-ple mean to try Webster again in April.

Justice Andrews asked for a copy of Judge Cowing's charge and of Webster's evidence, which the lawyers agreed to obtain for him-the reserved his decision until he could look over these documents. Fif y-four Errors in the Latin of His Diploma

Max Guggenheim, lately of 181 Eldridge street, was convicted in the General Sessions street, was convicted in the deneral sessions yesterday of practising medicine without a license, and was remanded to await sentence. Under the conviction, as it is for a second offence, he may be sentenced to the pentiany for two years and fined $1.000. Lawyer Purrington of the Lounty Medical Society pointed out fifty-four errors in the Latin of truggenheim's bogus diploma.
